

Business Recommendations

1. Prioritize retention incentives for high-volume, high-frequency users.
 - These customers are the most valuable and are most likely to stay engaged with targeted rewards.
2. Develop merchant or payment bundles for users who demonstrate frequent transaction behavior.
 - Payment-heavy customers can be offered loyalty programs, cashback, or merchant-specific offers.
3. Monitor failed transaction attempts as a signal of user friction.
 - High failure rates may indicate usability issues, network problems, or blocked payments.
4. Use weekend activity trends to design promotions for off-peak or after-hours service adoption.
 - Medium and high activity users are already active on weekends, so weekend offers may deepen engagement.
5. Segment low activity users separately for educational outreach.
 - These users may benefit from simple guidance on how to use mobile money services effectively.